A GUIDE FOR BRANDS ALREADY ON AMAZON VENDOR

How to scale profitably in your category on Amazon Vendor.

What is quietly draining your margin and your team's time on Vendor, the full picture of it, and how brands already on Vendor have handed the complexity over and grown, with the numbers to prove it.

Rosetta Brands

info@rosettabrands.com | www.rosettabrands.com

1 ALREADY ON VENDOR

The access is yours.
Running it is the hard part.

Getting onto Amazon Vendor was the hard part, and you have done it. But holding a vendor account and running one profitably are two different things. Most brands on Vendor carry the whole operation on limited internal resource, and the fully loaded cost quietly eats the margin the channel promised.

	RUNNING VENDOR YOURSELF	VENDOR-AS-A-SERVICE
Who runs the operation	One person wearing every hat	A full Amazon-native team
Order processing & deliveries	Fragmented and inefficient — manual order processing and deliveries into multiple Amazon FCs	Automated weekly order processing and delivery into one Amazon FC
Commercial terms	What you negotiated alone	Our Top 15 account terms
Amazon support	No direct human contact	AVS and our Senior Amazon Stakeholder contacts
Fees & chargebacks	Variable, increasing and hard to quantify	An agreed single fixed margin
Time to grow the channel	Lost to day-to-day admin	Freed up: the team handles it

The profitability drain

Increasing MDF, damage allowance and overstock fees. Not to mention the variable chargebacks, cost price decrease asks, promotional funding — the list goes on. Most of it is hard to forecast and easy to under-count, so the true cost stays hidden.

The resource drain

One person as advertiser, finance, and operations, with no time left for growth. Amazon never gets the attention it needs, and revenue plateaus.

IN SHORT

Running Vendor well is a full-time, specialist operation. Doing it on part-time resource, while paying Amazon's mandatory and variable costs in full, is what quietly caps the margin. It is a fixable problem.

2 WHERE THE MARGIN GOES

The full picture: what running Vendor yourself really costs.

Vendor's costs do not arrive as a single line. They come from every corner of the relationship, and most are variable and hard to forecast. Here they are in full: the fixed and variable fees and the operational load that decide whether Amazon is profitable, or a drain. Most, if not all, are charges on the remittance, some are pure time, and every one of them is either a cost to control or a task a specialist can take off your plate.

MDF/COOP fees
Mandatory marketing and merchandising contributions.

Damage allowances
Agreed deductions for damages, taken off the top.

Overstock & Return Allowance
Returns, storage, plus long-term and overstock penalties.

AVS & escalation
Vendor support tickets and escalations to chase.

PICS
A fee for delivering into a singular Amazon FC.

Chargebacks
Variable penalties for compliance and delivery misses.

Shortages & disputes
Remittance deductions to reconcile and reclaim.

Cost-price pressure
Annual vendor negotiations that squeeze margin and intermittent cost price reduction asks.

Advertising & promotional funding
Ad and promotional spend and its efficiency, often run unbilled.

Subscribe & Save and Amazon Business
Billed on a flex agreement, often inconsistent with ROI hard to measure.

Born-To-Run retention fees
Deducted from your account if manually created orders don't sell through.

PO reconciliation
Weekly POs to review, accept, and fulfil on time.

Suppression & listings
Identifying ASIN suppression and content issues to resolve.

Content & A+ pages
Imagery, A+ modules, and Brand Store upkeep.

The headcount
The dedicated person, or people, the above require.

THE REALITY

Most vendors cannot fully quantify what Amazon costs them, because it comes from so many places at once. Counted fully, including the headcount, Amazon can stop looking like growth and start looking like a drain. It does not have to.

Vendor-as-a-Service: keep the brand, hand over the grind.

This is what Rosetta Brands does. You do not hand over your account or your brand. Your products trade through our established, Top 15 UK Vendor account and inherit terms that beat what you negotiated alone, run end to end by our specialist team.

Better terms, inherited

Trade through our Top 15 account and inherit commercial terms stronger than a single brand can negotiate alone. Fifteen-plus years of vendor relationships sit behind them.

The whole burden lifts

Your vendor fees and variable chargebacks transfer to us, replaced by one fixed margin. Deliveries consolidate to one weekly order into one fulfilment centre.

Real Amazon support

Issue resolution gets faster and more consistent through our AVS relationship and direct human Amazon contacts, not a ticket queue you chase.

A team, not a person

A full team replaces the stretched individual: advertising, forecasting, NPD launches, and category insight, all working the channel every week.

THE NET EFFECT

For roughly the 20 to 25% you already pay Amazon in fees, the entire operational burden lifts and the commercial terms improve. Your resource and your profitability, handed back.

> "If we didn't have Rosetta Brands, we would have to employ a team."
>
> UK FMCG brand · on the resource of running Amazon

The step change: from grind to growth.

A brand already on Vendor does not need access. It needs the operation run properly and the economics fixed. Moving to Vendor-as-a-Service lifts the whole burden, and with a full team behind the channel, the plateau breaks.

An RTD protein shake brand, running its own vendor account

This brand held its own Amazon vendor account, but revenue had been flat in the £30,000 to £60,000 a month range, with one team stretched across advertising, finance, and operations. After a managed transition to Rosetta Brands in early 2025:

~£200k	~4x	12 mo	NPD
Monthly run rate reached, from £30–60k	Revenue within twelve months	To the step change	New launches enabled again

Consolidated deliveries and a fixed margin replaced fragmented fulfilment centres and variable chargebacks, meaningful Amazon-fee savings landed on the P&L, and streamlined listing and forecasting made new product launches possible again.

What the move unlocked

A dedicated Amazon team, consolidated single-FC delivery, and NPD launches through streamlined listing and forecasting.

How it runs now

One weekly order, a fixed and predictable margin in place of variable chargebacks, and the internal team freed to focus on the wider business.

> "Where you really stand out is the approach you have with making the process simple for my internal teams. Order, shipping, delivery. This has made a huge difference, and we are finding this process a lot more straightforward and cost efficient."
>
> Founder · UK RTD drinks brand, moved to the Rosetta Brands vendor account

We don't just manage Amazon.
We are your Amazon account.

Rosetta Brands is the UK's only Vendor-as-a-Service for consumer brands. Your products trade under our Top 15 UK Grocery Vendor account, the first-party status Amazon no longer issues, while we run the channel end to end: the fees, the compliance, the fulfilment, and the advertising. You get enterprise-grade Amazon access and predictable, wholesale-style payment, without building the team or carrying the risk.

£100M+	950+	100+	15+ yrs
Generated for our clients	UK brands worked with	Amazon Best Sellers	Amazon experience

A FEW OF OUR PARTNERS WE WORK WITH

See what Vendor-as-a-Service looks like for you.

An honest read on what Amazon is really costing you today, and what changes when the operation and the economics are run for you. If it is the right move, we will show you exactly what it looks like, step by step.

info@rosettabrands.com | +44 (0)333 344 8171 | www.rosettabrands.com